

Changes to your statements

Effective December 31, 2015, we implemented changes to your statements as a result of a series of regulatory requirements referred to as Client Relationship Model – Phase 2 (CRM2). Effective December 2020, we have made enhancements to your statements to identify mutual funds that may be subject to a redemption restriction. These changes will help improve and create transparency with respect to costs and performance among your investments. The investments reflected in the statement below are for illustrative purposes only and may not be available for all account types.

- 1 Many sections have been updated with new language and definitions. Please read through and review.

- 2 If applicable, “How Held” has been added to indicate if the investment is segregated or not segregated from the assets of the dealer.

- 3 “Book Cost” has replaced “Book Value.” “Book Cost” refers to the total amount paid to purchase an investment, including any transactional charges related to the purchase, adjusted for distributions, return of capital and corporate reorganizations.

- 4 Market value for equities and fixed income will be based on Bid / Ask price instead of close price.

- 5 Securities that show stale-dated pricing (no pricing information received for 90 days) will reflect a market value of “NA” and values will not be included in the totals.

- 6 “” will display on mutual funds to indicate that the fund may be subject to a deferred sales charge (DSC) or other sales charges levied by the fund manufacturer if sold.

- 7 Investments that have redemption restrictions will show “###” and the footnote “May be subject to a redemption restriction” will be displayed to clearly identify those investments.

- 8 If the market value is an estimate, it will show “” and the footnote “The market value is an estimate as there is not an active market value for this investment” will be displayed to indicate that the market value is an estimate.

- 9 “No Activity” notification will display in the Pending and Account activity section of the statement for accounts that have no activity during the statement period.
